Rectory hall ceiling repairs

This week a contractor selected by Parish Council worked on the Rectory hall ceiling to repair water damage caused by a roof leak during the storms of Anzac weekend in April. The roof was repaired promptly and the gutters cleaned as preventive maintenance.

In the absence of a regular “preferred service provider” the Diocese requires three comparative quotations for maintenance work. Council chose a contractor at its last meeting in early June.

That collapsing arch...

The specialists consulted declined to repair the arch deeming it too seriously damaged and too risky, requiring assessment by a structural engineer. We already have a comprehensive report compiled in January 2019, so it seems that the time has come for serious consideration of the future of All Souls' church buildings. – Julia
